1. Introduction

This course aims to introduce students to sociology. The course will look into the essential concepts, theories, perspectives, and methods that have shaped the discipline of sociology. Then, the course will delve into various key issues in sociological studies, including class, gender, sexuality, race, ethnicity, religion, education, globalization, mobility, and the media. To help students better understand the sociological way of thinking, this course will explore various social issues and cultural phenomena in contemporary South Korean society. The knowledge gained in this course will help students acquire proper sociological perspectives for critical understanding of the world.

2. Course Objectives

- Learning specific areas of study and methods used within sociology.
- Learning how to read current social issues from a critical and analytical perspective.
- Learning the way to organize sociological thinking and ideas into a clear argument.
